

Who's watching your nanny

In todays day and age you should be watching your nanny as they wacth your kids

The nanny or babysitter may be watching the kids, but who is watching the nanny? Every week thousands of reports of suspected child abuse and neglect are reported. Youngest children are the most vulnerable. Family members, friends, nannies and babysitters are all common offenders. Many of these crimes can be prevented if the right equipment is used.

Keeping an eye on the babysitter or nanny used to be considered paranoia and was only done by people who were considered insecure and untrusting. This is no longer the case. Using a nanny cam is now a common practice in the home, and for a good reason. It can help keep your kids safe.

A nanny cam is a hidden camera in common everyday household items used to keep an eye on unsuspecting individuals. As a result, parents now know exactly what is going on while they are away and are able to make educated decisions regarding their children's wellbeing. Cameras don't always have to be hidden. These cameras can act as a deterrent if a babysitter or nanny knows that they are being monitored.

Nanny cams often catch abuse before it becomes critical and life threatening. Cameras are often hidden in daily home appliances such as smoke alarms, lamps, clocks and stuffed animals. The cameras are so small that they cannot be easily detected. Captured video can be later viewed or viewed in real tie over the internet and used as evidence if necessary.
