

Delta Force: Black Hawk Down - first-person shooter releases new version

Black Hawk Down succeeds as a first person shooter with great visual graphics and sound.

[b]Delta Force: Black Hawk Down, the first-person shooter set developed by NovaLogic, released a new version for its fans.[/b]

[b]Black Hawk Down[/b] succeeds as a first person shooter with great visual graphics and sound. It does however, miss on a few aspects such as over scripted missions, and short overall storyline. Sticking with the single player game, there are some features that gamers looking for something different in a FPS won't find. For instance the missions are scripted, so much so at times that it makes the AI seem a bit lackluster and mindless. Also following the mission waypoints is a must, this leads to a lack of freedom compared with games such as Grand Theft Auto 3.

Some reviews on Amazon & Game Sites:

Great First Person Shooter

"The game play was a little linear, but overall very good. Weapons damage was fairly realistic. Graphics look a little dated, but doesn't detract from the game play."

Great Game !! Tries to be as real as can be in a game. no problems with install or installing exp packs. I dont think you would be disappointed.

My boys are always on the computer playing the game and it is very entense. It give them hand and eye challenges and really makes them think. I have played some on the game and find it fun and challengeing as well.

[large]Very entertaining albeit very scripted. Imagine yourself an actor in an alternate version of the movie. It places you in a very good story with some interesting maps and missions.[/large]
